A "L.A.P.D." is a Los Angeles Police Department officer, but it can also be a handle for an officer with that of the cop's uniform. Gameplay The game is based on a parody of the Los Angeles Police Department that allows the player to control up to 40 police officers in action-packed situations. The game has eight chapters, each of which has six levels. As a police officer, the player moves and shoots in several different ways. Although the player can move by walking or driving a police vehicle, a great part of the game involves running from place to place, usually in pursuit of an unseen enemy. To run, the player simply clicks and drags the mouse to move the character. The player can run in a straight line or on a pre-programmed course. One of the most unusual abilities is the ability to "shoot and grab," where the player can fire off a gun and then quickly move to catch the thrown object (usually a dummy) and throw it again. When the player is doing this, the player cannot run or otherwise move the character. The main goal of the player is to arrest the enemy police officers. However, the player can also arrest innocent civilians if the enemy chooses to arrest civilians. The game is set in L.A. as well as a few other locations. For example, the player may have to arrest an evil magician at a school; the player must simply find him and arrest him. The player has to arrest the magician and take him to an asylum, where a psychiatric surgeon removes the "magic" (a.k.a. soul) from him. Besides shooting, the player must gather evidence by solving mini-games such as acting as a detective, forensic scientist, and other related activities. Some of the evidence includes fingerprints, blood samples, and so forth. There are also numerous items in each level that the player can find by using the detective skill. Other activities include searching for the best recipes to fight weapons, giving high scores at pinball tables, and so forth. Some of the weapons include tasers, electric cattle prods, shockers, and other items. One of the pinball tables is set in the California state prison system, where the player must beat the "Super Offender." The Super Offender is a man who wears a tuxedo and has a habit of shooting the player 82157476af
